WHAT ENGLAND GETS.

The Congressional Record of recent date gives fresh evidence of British molding of the peace treaty. It carries conviction. Senator Frelinghuysen, in his speech to the Senate, quoted Lord Curzon, a member of the British Government, as saying in the House of Lords: "It is open to me to say with a real and accurate knowledge of what has been passing in Paris during the past six months, that the Prime Minister, by a combination of courage and imagination . . . has often held the balance between conflicting parties, and is largely personally responsible for the contents of that blue volume. In what I have said I hope I have not indulged in one sentence that could savor of national vanity or boasting. But it is permissible, perhaps, to point out in a sentence that Great Britain has gained in this war all, she set out to win. Our navy remains at the end of the war intact and unassailable. The principle of the freedom of the seas, which is the basis of our national existence, stands unimpaired and unimpugned. The British protectorate of Egypt is provided for in one of the clauses in this treaty." The Senator further quoted Lieut. Col. Hilder, who said in the British House of Commons: "The outstanding feature of the peace treaty is that it puts the British Empire at the highest point that has ever been reached as regards territory and world influence." Upon the same day in the British Parliament Horatio Bottomley, M. P., said: "May I compliment the Prime Minister on the great acumen he showed when he secured Britain as the mandatory of the ex-German colonies, because I believe that before we get on very far with the ex-German colonies the League of Nations will come to an untimely end. . . . It is possible that when we have spent a lot of money and had a few little wars we shall come out with the German ex-colonies to our credit. At present we owe America $1,000,000,000. Let her take over some of the obligations of Russia to ourselves. Let us see some sincerity in those high principles enunciated so freely on the other side of the water." Her banker, policeman, and "handy man!" Who gave England the right to expect these things of America?

PATRIOTISM.

The Catholic Telegraph is right in declaring it a mistake to imagine that patriotism is only that dramatic display of the courageous fighting spirit, made during the infrequent wars, that falls to the lot of every country. It is indeed true that the bravery of the soldier and the daring of the marine are admirable manifestations of the patriotic spirit, but the infrequency of the demand for their exhibition could never generate that habitual love of country, developed by the repetition of acts of devotion, that alone deserves the noble name of patriotism. "Peace hath her victories, no less renowned than war," and offers opportunities almost daily for the performance of deeds which prove the progress of the country and the betterment of the people. To foster respect for civil authority and obedience to civil law, to preserve peace and order, to stand for high ideals in public and private life, to aid movements for social welfare and general community uplift—these are labors of love to the genuine patriot; these are the distinguishing marks of real, practical patriotism. There is a special, crying need for this real, practical patriotism at the present time, when the forces of disorder and anarchy are threatening the very foundations of our Republic. These are times that try men's souls. These are times that distinguish the false pretenders from the sincere pure patriots. Whoever does not now stand for law and order and peace is a traitor to his country, an enemy to the American people.

OCCASION OF INTEREST.

Sunday, October 12, the Knights of Columbus will celebrate Discovery day here locally and throughout the country. The anniversary of the discovery of this continent by Columbus is now more than ever an occasion of public interest and rejoicing. The great order that bears his name, and bears it so honorably, has won great distinction in the recent world conflict and has shown itself worthy of the name it bears. Columbus' story should be renewed on the coming 12th and told to the rising generation of Americans, so that they may always be inspired by his great faith and sterling fortitude through trial and danger and disappointment. Through darkest clouds and storm his prayerful lips uttered the words "Sail on!" heedless of his perilous surroundings. If all of us had the same faith through all the storms of life and the crosses and trials, it would indeed be well.

ARE AMERICANS YET.

United States Senator Hiram Johnson, addressing the public at Minneapolis, sounded warning against the secret decrees that may come from the League of Nations unless the peace treaty underwent amendment. Of the few men who made themselves the dictators of the destinies of the world and their acts he says: "After all, my friends, this Government doesn't belong to one man, even if he is President. It belongs to you and it belongs to me; it belongs to your sons and to my sons, and if we have got to fight, I rebel. I revolt, that in this nation today the destinies of those hundred million people should be in one man's hands, who secretly, after promising us again and again that secrecy should never obtain, secretly is disposing of your blood and mine. This question that I talk to you about is not a partisan question. I don't care what the Republican party or the Democratic party or what any other party thinks upon this thing. This question and this issue transcend in importance any political party that ever existed or ever will exist in this land. The issue, my friends, is America, it is the Republic that Washington gave to us, that Lincoln saved for us; it is the Republic wherein you want to live and have your sons and your sons' sons live; where I demand that mine shall live, not under a dictator, or a man who takes unto himself the disposal of my blood in secrecy, but under a constitution and under laws that we ourselves shall make. The issue in this contest is America. Thank God, my friends, we are yet Americans."

FINDS OUT TRUTH.

The editor of the London News finds out after an extensive tour through this country that there is quite a bit of feeling against England in the United States and attributes most of that ill feeling to John Bull's treatment of Ireland. He also refers to the pro-English press in this country, and truthfully says that its "England first" policy is quite ineffective with the people of America. Our visitor might have added that 90 per cent. of our soldier and sailor boys came back very much anti-English because of their experience with the selfish and domineering British army.

SUBJECT FOR BRYAN.

Now that the public is getting tired of hearing Grape Juice Bryan on his prohibition lectures, why doesn't some of the churches who are fond of having him appear suggest for his subject the fight he made in the courts against the widow, Mrs. Philo Bennett, for the estate of her husband.

The Massachusetts Democratic State convention commended President Wilson's administration, also the League of Nations peace treaty, "provided the covenant is so amended as to give to no other nation more votes than the United States, to protect the sovereignty of the American people; to protect the right of self-determination and to refrain from adding to the burden of peoples wanting to be free and independent."

COLUMBUS BANQUET.

The Italians of Louisville will celebrate Columbus day with a reunion and elaborate banquet at the Tyler Hotel tomorrow night, at which many prominent citizens will be seated. Rev. Charles P. Raffo, pastor of St. Charles Borromeo church, will deliver the address of the evening.
